

An iPDF can help people find resources

Click the arrow symbol (▶) in the top two boxes and you'll arrive at a web page. The other boxes have no links.

In our experience, firms can have terrific internal systems, but users will insist that they can't find them. This idea is simple – put all the links in a single PDF together with a few simple tips on how to use them.

The text on this page is to show the idea of a quick-links iPDF only.

Click on arrows to go to resources.

Click on text to find out more.

Four ways to improve legal updates ▶

This link will take you to a page on our website that suggests ways to improve client-facing know-how.

About One Three Four ▶

Yes, you guessed right – this link goes to another page on our website, but it opens in a new browser window.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Legal know-how information covering multiple topics and locations.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Complete sets of transaction documents, mainly used by capital markets and finance lawyers.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Legal know-how information on several topics and multiple locations.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Legal know-how information on security, and taking security, in over 300 locations.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Comprehensive, searchable global archive of client publications.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Includes capital markets, derivatives, corporation (environment), employment.

Example of a headline

Dummy text for mock-up. Content includes briefings from most London teams.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Includes letters to clients, counsel's opinions, internal legal surveys, and training materials.

Example of a headline

Dummy text. Topics range from practice points to rapidly-developing legislation.

Know-how resources?

Local know-how contact ▶

- Precedents
- Guidance
- Hot topics

* Don't forget to check with your local know-how contact before you rely on any know-how resource content.